

Wli Waterfalls; Volta Region Waterfalls

Wli Falls, also called Agumatsa Falls, is a popular and dramatic tourist site near the village of Wli not far from the Togo border. Most tourists make the easy walk to the lower falls, which is stunning and in a beautiful setting, made even more dramatic by the presence of thousands of fruit bats nesting high up on the nearby cliffs. However, the equally high and much more isolated upper falls is a special treat for those with the stamina for the challenging hike. There are inviting pools at the base of both falls where the hearty can take a chilly dip.

The walks take you through the Agumatsa Wildlife Sanctuary, which features more than 200 bird species and 400 butterfly species.

Activities :

- Hike with a guide to the lower falls on an easy, mostly flat trail that crosses two rivers 8 times on bridges.
- Branch from the main path with your guide to climb the steep and challenging trail to the upper falls. Sturdy footwear recommended. Time: 4 hours
- Visit the Shrine of Lesser gods, said to have been brought by village ancestors from Togo. Your guide will explain the history
- Wli is open year-round. The falls always have water, but flow is significantly reduced during the dry season (October-March) and the hike to the upper falls is normally too slippery and treacherous during the rainiest months.
- Home stays can be arranged at the visitor centre and camping is also permitted there. Private lodging is available at two hotels in Wli that also serve food.

How to get here:

From Hohoe drive east, turning right at Lipke Bakwa to reach Wli in 3 km. The visitor centre is on the edge of the village. Trotros travel these roads frequently.

Cliffs near the waterfall are home to thousands of fruit bats
