

Kyabobo National Park

Rock Shrine

One of Ghana's newest ecotourism sites, the 220-square-kilometre Kyabobo National Park is recognized internationally as a unique mountainous conservation area with stunning views and well protected wilderness. It offers challenging multiple day hikes through its rugged terrain as well as interesting cultural experiences.

Plans are moving forward to link Kyabobo with the contiguous Fazao-Malfacassa National Park in Togo to create Ghana's first trans-frontier park. In the future, this cross-border cooperation may allow visitors to hike freely between both parks.

Activities:

- Enjoy the stunning view from the park's Breast Mountains. On a clear day, you may see all the way to Lake Volta.
- Rent a mountain bike at the park headquarters to cycle around the Breast Mountains, stopping for refreshments at Keri village before returning.
- Walk to Kylinga on the Togo border, one of the most remote villages in Ghana. Here the unique culture of the Akyode tribe has been preserved due to physical and cultural isolation.
- Visit the beautiful 60-metre-high Laboum Waterfall and dip in the pond at its foot. Watch birds and small mammals from a nearby game viewing hide.
- Hike from Koue along the mountain ridge to see a shrine and sacred grove. Sleep on a platform overlooking the shrine and watch the bats come out of the cave.

Directions

From the main Ho-Tamale Road at Nkwanta, turn at the Kyabobo National Park sign onto the road for 5 km to the park headquarters. Trotros are available from Accra, Hohoe and Tamale (change at Bimbila). Local taxis may be available for the 5 km from the main road to the visitor
